

A PIEROGI TOO FAR: THE POLISH SECOND REPUBLIC

COULTER JOHNSON

CHAIR

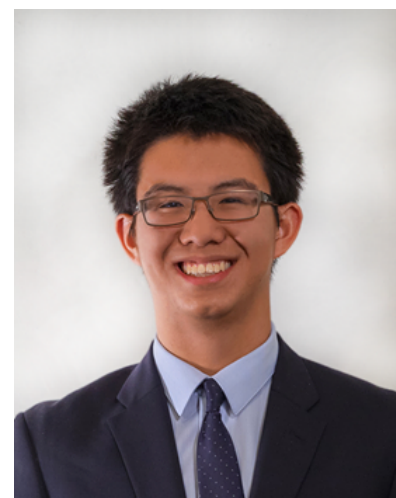

Coulter is a second year student coming from Geneva Switzerland. Previously, Coulter participated as an assistant chair to the Putin's cabinet committee. Outside of ChoMUN, Coulter studies Biology and Computational Neuroscience in the pre-med program. In his free time, he participates on the UChicago Rugby team, and works in an on campus lab. Outside of these, Coulter frequently follows the premier league, as Liverpool stride further and further out of Leicester's grip. #YNWA. He enjoys spending his free time with his brothers at the Zeta Psi fraternity, which often involves playing Super Smash Bros with the boys. Last but not least, he stubbornly insists that South Park is the greatest TV show to ever have been made, boasting that he has seen every episode at least three times over. If you have any questions or for some other reason would like to reach out, feel free to contact him at cbjohnston@uchicago.edu

THADEUS J. OBORA

CRISIS DIRECTOR

Thadeus is a third-year History and Political Science major at the University of Chicago, hailing from the western suburbs of Chicago. Last year, he served as a crisis director on the Chicago World's Fair committee, and before that, an assistant chair on the Roman Senate. Thadeus also participates in staffing the high school MUN conference, where he serves as a crisis director, and the college travel team, where he is the social chair. Outside of MUN, Thadeus enjoys reading, long strolls on the beach, watching movies, and exploring Chicago's vibrant cultural and culinary scene. He also maintains a large collection of vintage fountain pens and typewriters, which he buys, sells, and restores. Thadeus is immensely passionate about history and fun facts, and his favorite Facebook meme page is "Daily Updates on the Status of the Roman Empire". (It's gone.) If you have any questions/fun facts regarding history, Chicago, and specifically the committee, feel free to contact Thadeus at thadeusjobora@uchicago.edu, and he will get back to you.

MICHAEL WANG

CRISIS DIRECTOR

Michael Wang is a third year in the College, majoring in Economics and History. He grew up in Albany, California, which literally no one has heard of. As a result, he tells people that he's from San Francisco. He realized that he loved Chicago after he visited in the summer and then subsequently realized he made a terrible mistake during the winter. Michael staffed The Korean Captains of Industry at CHOMUN XXI and the United Nations Security Council at MUNUC 30. He Crisis Directed Muhammad Ali Pasha's Egypt at ChoMUN XXII. He currently is a member of the UChicago Model UN Team. In his spare time, Michael can be found selling his soul to the highest bidder, while claiming "Don't worry, it's just a path to politics." He maintains a distinct network of acquaintances that secretly don't like him, and loves to say that he'll "go to the gym tomorrow." At times, Michael seems like a Renaissance man, as he enjoys drawing mysterious symbols on high ceilings completely unprompted. If questioned, Michael will insist that the Moon Landing was indeed faked and that the common cold comes from the positions of the planets. Reach out at michaeljwang@uchicago.edu.
